

ENTER INTO A WORLD OF FAITH, SPIRITS, SYMBOLISM, AND A LOVE THAT CROSSES TIME...

A wonderful love story, mystery, and mystical adventure all rolled up into one fast-moving and brilliantly told story.

—Nick Chiarkas, State Public
Defender Emeritus, author of Weepers

Engrossing debut...Goss boldly blurs the spiritual, the secular and the supernatural - resulting in a story that, depending on how deep your faith goes, seems eerily real."

Josephine Reilly is a typical young mother, striving to do what is best for her family in the suburbs of St. Paul, Minnesota. Declan, her ambitious and talented husband, has a thriving career as a corporate lawyer. On the surface, life could not appear more perfect.

Yet, Josie has an unrealized gift, one that has haunted her since the drowning death of a childhood friend. Josie is a messenger, as was her mother and grandmother before her, carrying messages from the dead to the living through dreams, visions and telepathy. For years, Josie suppresses her gift but when mother dies, she is unable to ignore it any longer.

Upon exploring her ability, she finds she's underestimated the dangers in channeling the dead when those she loves become targets of an invisible evil. Her sanity comes into question and she's at risk of losing everything she holds dear. Then fate places Dr. Andrew Chase in Josie's path, a healer of supernatural capabilities. Only he hasn't come to prevent her fall . . .

The Uncommitted is a compelling tale of the spiritual struggle within us and of the realities beyond our physical sight.

About the Author

Margaret M. Goss was born in Oswego, New York, to first-generation Italian-American parents, studied nursing at Arizona State University and public policy and administration at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Her mother, an art teacher and painter, and her father, an English teacher, musician and writer, passed on their love of reading, art and music to her at a early age. However, it wasn't until after her children were born that she was able to indulge her creative passion, writing.
